mmO₂ LAUNCHES 'THE O₂ GAMES ARCADE' -

THE FIRST COMMERCIAL JAVA™ GAMES SERVICE IN THE UK

Released: 28 August 2002

mmO₂ today launched the O₂ games arcade – the first commercial Java games service in the UK - bringing pictures, colour, sound and an arcade feel to mobile gaming. All O₂ games arcade games will be free to UK customers for one month from 1 to 30 September 2002. The service will launch across the other O₂ territories (Germany, Ireland and the Netherlands) from October.

A wide selection of games are offered within the O₂ games arcade at launch, including Atari classics - Asteroids®, Pong® and Breakout® - plus Marslander™, Men in Black II™, Denkiblocks!™, Oilrig™, Racing Fever™, Forbidden Jungle™, Pinball – The Castle™, Turtles™, Towers™, and Popstar™. Around three new games a month will be added to the O₂ games arcade. The Java-enabled Nokia 3410 is already available and proving very popular with youth audiences. The Siemens M50 will be available from 1 October, and a new range of Java-enabled devices, many of them colour, will be on sale pre-Christmas.

Analysts forecast that gaming on mobiles will be big business, extending the role of the mobile phone beyond communications. Forrester Research predicts that, in three years, 45% of mobile subscribers in Europe will regularly pay to play games on their mobile. Ovum forecasts that global spending on mobile games will total €4.4 billion by 2006. O₂'s own research highlighted that, when shown games from the O₂ games arcade, 65% of mobile owners aged 16-19 expressed a 'strong interest' in downloading them to their mobiles.

To date, the gaming market on mobile devices has been driven by SMS games. This year, more than four million games-related text messages per month have been sent over the O₂ UK network driven by the World Cup, Big Brother 3 and 'Who Wants To Be A Millionaire'.

mmO₂ is working with a number of game suppliers and developers, including Motorola, THQ, Digital Bridges, Macrospace, MR. Goodliving, Sumea, Picofun and Ifone to offer brands such as Atari™ and Men in Black II™. As well as partnering leading branded suppliers, O₂ will leverage its online application developer communities - including the 9,000 registered to sourceO₂, mmO₂'s accelerator of mobile services - to create winning games of the future.

Tim Raby, head of games for O₂, said: "Our research highlights that customers are looking for better 'playability', a greater challenge, enhanced colour graphics and a 'console-like' feel to games on their mobile – all of which the O₂ games arcade will deliver. We have selected games that are ideally suited to mobile – that look good on screen and take only minutes to download. To ensure variety, we will be adding around three games per month to our portfolio to ensure that our gamers never get bored."

Kent Thexton, chief marketing and data officer, mmO₂, added: "This is another example of how compelling devices and applications are coming together to make mobile data a reality today. We believe that the O₂ games arcade and multimedia messaging, which we will launch shortly, are highly desirable mobile data applications that our customers will embrace."

The launch of the O₂ games arcade is another first for mmO₂ in the mobile data arena. It was first to market with innovative mobile data devices including BlackBerry and the xda as well as the 3G live test and evaluation site on the Isle of Man.

Pricing

All O₂ games arcade games will be free to O₂ customers until 30 September 2002. There will be a small additional 'download' charge dependent on tariff and file size – an average GSM charge is expected to be around 30 pence (€0.50). Thereafter, games will be charged on an 'event basis' similar to ringtones. Every game will cost £1.50 (€2.50), plus the download charge mentioned above. Once the customer has downloaded the game, it will remain active on their handset for at least 30 days and can be played as often as liked.

Availability

The O₂ games arcade games are available to all customers on the O₂ network (both pre and post paid), provided their Java-enabled mobile is supported by the O₂ games arcade. Access to the O₂ games arcade varies by device, but has been designed to be intuitive and similar to other such services.

Note to Editors

What is Java?

Java (J2ME) is a programming language used to create applications. Applications created using Java can be downloaded and stored on a mobile handset for use as and when required. Examples of downloadable Java applications include interactive games, life management tools, travel-related applications and information tools. Such applications allow customers to customise their handsets.

Why use Java?

Programmers use Java because it offers greater cross-platform compatibility than other programming languages. To produce applications that run on mobile handsets, developers use a specific version of Java called J2Me (Java version 2 – Micro Edition). Although Java applications need to be handset/software specific, the changes required to make a game run on a number of different handsets make it much easier than re-coding from scratch for each device.

mmO₂ has 100% ownership of mobile network operators in four countries - the UK, Germany, the Netherlands and Ireland - as well as a leading mobile internet portal business. All of these businesses have now been re-branded as O₂. Additionally, the company has operations on the Isle of Man (Manx Telecom).

mmO₂ was the first company in the world to launch and rollout a commercial GPRS (or 2.5G) network and has secured third generation mobile telephony ("3G") licences in the UK, Ireland, the Netherlands, and Germany.

mmO₂ has approximately 17.75 million customers and some 14,000 employees, with revenues for the year ended 31 March 2002 of £4.276 million. Data represented 14.6% of total service revenues in the quarter ending 30 June 2002.
